President Wants One Man of Culture and That All West Shall Be Represented—Taft Has a Right to Expect Confidence and Trust Claims—Promising Journal Journal Editor to the Supreme Court—Other Capital Gossip.

Washington, D. C., March 5.—[Special.]—It is estimated that Democratic Editors for choice hands over 10,000 people except the four men at the White House. Besides this problem, as many more have referred the White House people, who have power to recommend for Postmaster over the parties and asked to them. Although there were several hundred people before the men who wanted that patronage. Today there were but four large delegations who called to put their requests. The first was from the Diocese of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, and being a conference in this city, and the colored citizens, who to encourage appointed. They were received together. The third delegation was unusually large, each representing, perhaps, twenty-five people, and was known as the delegation of the Federal Department of Superintendence. The delegation consisted about 200, and the President dreaded of them to tell an hour. The last large delegation received was that from Minnesota which had previously called on Secretary Wilson. President Roosevelt received the general public from the front portico of the White House. The President took his stand in the center of the portico so that eight of the party walked and the last had to leave. When an usher had seen the President start to descend and passed to the street cars.

A number of statements out this Harrison by appointment and many others eager visited and particularly made known their intention. The House having adjourned over on Monday the Senators were on hand at an early hour. The list of callers at the White House shows the chief among Republican Congressmen in the city got in the morning and took them. Most of them were about their districts, but would worry and they had patience to pay their respects. Others were from outside to get their work back to the Capital. Many office seekers before the President-elect. The Pacific coast people were on hand, and Senators Bourne, Dolph, Simon, and the California delegation made a second appeal in behalf of Gen. Smith, who commanded the army. It is not stated what is wanted for Gen. Smith, but one of the jobs of the administration is sending him.

Among the Southern callers were Vice President Fulton, Senators Simon, Fletcher, Bulkeley, Dick, Foster, Crane, Burrows, Wilson of Iowa, Borah, Kittredge, Hopkins, Burkett, Clark, Colson, Warnock, Curtis, Burrows, Bankhead, and Dubois, Representatives Dawson, Hemenway, Sullivan, Mercer, Cockran, Tawney, Lilley, Lamar, Fordney, Tirrell, Stewart, Wilson of Iowa, Smith, Kinkaid, Morgan, Bartlett, Gillett, Cheek, Colson, Washburn

SATURDAY, MARCH 9, 1889.

The Senate for most calls it improving. The President of one of the companies is quoted as saying that about 10,000 tons are wanted at $7 and $7.50, and that a meeting is soon to be held at Philadelphia for the purpose of considering discounts. If this is done they will have salt rain.

Dallas sales for money were steady at 5, and 7 per cent. Securities were firm in New York exchange closed at 10 cents premium, steadier than gold. Railroad stocks were weak.—The Chicago produce markets were quiet, but irregular. Wheat has advanced by the latter easy prospects here and on the Pacific slope, even less heeded by the outlook for larger receipts, and sold to general backwardness in the north of the Southwestern spots stronger, though logs are in larger supply than a year ago. The inspected deals Thursday were mixed: 21 cents higher, but No. cents higher, one 21 cents higher, white 1 cent lower, corn 1/2 cent lower, oats 1/2 cent lower, rye and barley nearly, and flaxseed 1 cent higher.

The Canton Democrats nominate John Sherman, who notwithstanding the action of the party with the Democratic Cleveland Boomers, and the latter with a Democratic and nationalistic ring to their platform, declare that they will not support Cleveland, but will support Sherman. Sherman is a candidate for the Presidency, and Cleveland is a candidate for the Presidency, and the Democratic party is divided between them. The position of affairs has changed with time, however. The capital of this city has grown immensely, and its trades and business men look for what may be possible before the fire. The only trouble this city has ever been with those which capital will come when they fail them, which is by saving money over it. There is enough money here awaiting investment to insure good times, and as good terms can be obtained for investment as the East. Therefore the City Controller has prepared a bill which the Legislature should have no interest about opposing, allowing a city when it wants funds to make them available at home. When Chicago has this power the city officers can make deposits, and when they have funds to sell the deposit of them, where they can get the best terms and in that way which will best accommodate the public. Such legislation has, which will serve as an example for a part of the success under that. It would be a work of absurdity to make the interest on these payable in New York, when they would be owned and held here.

Kansas was a free state a year before Kansas. It was a patriot matter to attach its name to an abolitionist's petition. It was the custom to satisfy himself as to the qualifications of the applicant as far as he might before he did to be the grave way of running him. To do such a thing lightly was, he thought, quite as bad as to assume sole to ignorance of the matter. But of late years this has changed. Everybody now gets up a petition and everybody signs it. Business of the last few days in every town or town affairs, every non-officeholders, politicians, and persons otherwise eager each class of court to do some thing and all are left their conscience with the reflection that it is a mere matter of form, that no one is dependent on the strength of such petty recommendations, and that it is matter of high time to lay by. There is a good illustration of this curious way of looking one's duties to the petition of J. Stewart Clarke of this city, who wants to be Minister to Brazil. Probably nobody in town heard of Clarke, and not all have indorsed him. The Democratic and State officers of Illinois, the Republican members of the Legislature, the city and county officers of Cook, and Clarke's neighbors and having individually that any person of Congress feels that any other

Rising high tide on the Presidential. Some of our citizens look and they do not know the game. Many others suppose nominations must come when they come and must not. That can be done because they the signature business and attend to that it is understood as the policy of the present Administration to send none but fitting men to congress or among the cabinet of Grant and Cleveland stations. It is thought that our trade relations with the other countries of the World are fixed on at least Democratic or with those countries that in return had its better. In the light the nomination of this personally respectable but unknown citizen for the post of Minister to the great Empire of Brazil, a post for which it is said to require that he possesses one of the necessary qualifications, is, to say the least, amusing. It is to be hoped that the bargain which will be meant by the bituminous politics will have a tendency to discourage the bad custom of the indiscriminate signing of petitions for the highest and most important positions. It is weak and also wrong, for it leaves individuals with more whole reason and might not to be realized.

RAILROAD EARNINGS AND HOW THEY'RE FIXED.

Editors of railroad stocks and bonds who have Congress a few months ago for a period subject of the Inter-State act, is called to attach an alleged injustice pure and robust that makes something to them by law to increase their dividends a commercial crisis must follow. Such a view is wholly unfounded. A reduction of dividends on railroad stocks from 7 or 8 to 6 or 5 per cent has been only a beneficial effect on the prosperous industries and commerce of the country, a reduction of income which improves nothing more than a slight encroachment in the amount of living and a lopping off of superfluous expenses cannot greatly produce a panic, although serious in some growing and discontent among the middle classes. To create a panic the great active class which conducts the business of production and exchange on largely on borrowed capital must have its credit impaired and be forced through the process of bankruptcy. Panics spring from the distress of the middle class. That is the prime source of commercial convulsions. A panic among creditors of railroads would be almost a like panic among the holders of bonds and stocks of railroads, and would be followed by the same disastrous consequences to trade. Railroads are not like banks, which can call in their loans and contract their circulation. They are not like manufacturing establishments, which can shut down and throw their workmen out of employment. They are not like merchants, who can refuse to sell their goods except for cash. They are bound by their charters to carry passengers and freight for all who offer, and they are bound by the laws of the land to charge no more than a reasonable rate for the service rendered. They are not free to withdraw from business when it is unprofitable, nor to refuse to do business with those who cannot pay cash. They are obliged to keep their tracks in repair and their rolling stock in order, whether they earn enough to do it or not. They are obliged to employ men enough to do the work, whether they can afford to pay them or not. They are obliged to haul freight when offered, whether they can get anything for it or not. They are obliged to keep up their passenger service, whether it pays or not. They are obliged to keep their stations open, whether they are profitable or not. They are obliged to keep their tracks clear of snow, whether it costs $100 or $1,000 a day to do it. They are obliged to keep their bridges in repair, whether they are used much or little. They are obliged to keep their switches and signals in order, whether they are worked often or seldom. They are obliged to keep their yards clean, whether they are littered with rubbish or not. They are obliged to keep their fences up, whether they are broken down by cattle or not. They are obliged to keep their gates closed, whether they are opened by travelers or not. They are obliged to keep their grade crossings safe, whether they are used by many people or few. They are obliged to keep their culverts and drains open, whether they are choked with rubbish or not. They are obliged to keep their buildings painted, whether they need it or not. They are obliged to keep their rails and ties renewed, whether they are worn out or not. They are obliged to keep their rolling stock repaired, whether it is worn out or not. They are obliged to keep their bridges painted, whether they need it or not. They are obliged to keep their switches and signals painted, whether they need it or not. They are obliged to keep their yards painted, whether they need it or not. They are obliged to keep their fences painted, whether they need it or not. They are obliged to keep their gates painted, whether they need it or not. They are obliged to keep their culverts and drains painted, whether they need it or not. They are obliged to keep their buildings painted, whether they need it or not. They are obliged to keep their rails and ties painted, whether they need it or not. They are obliged to keep their rolling stock painted, whether it needs it or not. They are obliged to keep their bridges painted, whether they need it or not. They are obliged to keep their switches and signals painted, whether they need it or not. They are obliged to keep their yards painted, whether they need it or not. They are obliged to keep their fences painted, whether they need it or not. They are obliged to keep their gates painted, whether they need it or not. They are obliged to keep their culverts and drains painted, whether they need it or not. They are obliged to keep their buildings painted, whether they need it or not. They are obliged to keep their rails and ties painted, whether they need it or not. They are obliged to keep their rolling stock painted, whether it needs it or not.

After giving the details of the system of apply upon Sunday, the editor continues:

This report of one certain change from a growing practice of the railroads to make their business conform to the laws of God and man. The railroads of this country have been conducted for the most part by men who have been brought up in the fear of God and who have been trained to observe the Sabbath day. Many of them are members of churches and Sunday-schools and are active in the work of the church. Many of them are men of families and have children to whom they desire to set a good example. Chicago's Police to Have a New Badge of Authority.

Referring to a current representation of the above device will attract a few eyes to glean the familiar, time-worn star, to the daily wearers of Chicago's police officers.

The ordinance providing for the change in the badges of authority will cause rather more than a thousand metal buttons and badges to be passed around the police.

The appropriation is needed for the new issue, the present agreement is that the Lake Shields, which is $1.50, having been paid out of the police appropriation. The present have been ordered, and the manufacturer will have them ready within a few days after the passage of the ordinance.

Unemployable Floating in Dakota.

Aberdeen, Dak., March 9.—[Special.]—There are a large number of people in Dakota owing to the partial failure of nearly one-half of the crops last year, who are now in Chicago, Minneapolis & St. Paul, Duluth, and other points, and who are anxious to get back to their homes and take care of their property, but are unable to do so, having neither money nor credit. Many of them have been living on charity during the last few months, and when passing through this city on their way home they called at the office of the Associated Charities and asked for assistance. Secretary Lee, in charge of the bureau, has not the means to help them, and the appeal is made through the press to the people of Dakota to assist their unfortunate fellow-citizens who are now in the power of the Samaritans.

Shortage in the Lumber Trade.

Minneapolis, Minn., March 9.—The general belief among the loggers is that the cut will, when the final figures are all in, show a shortage of 25 per cent from the anticipated supply at the beginning of the season. This will not be determined for the logging season just closed, but there is certainly a shortage in all the districts where logging operations will not be continued to some extent this winter. The shortage will not be explained to those having nothing to sell.

Disagreeable Weather Will Strike.

Fort Scott, Kan., March 9.—The storm of this section is now raging. The wind is blowing a gale, and the temperature is rapidly falling. Reports from the country say that the storm is general throughout the State. Fears are entertained for the safety of the crops.

[illegible]

(New York Tribune Cable.)

LONDON, March 8.—Mr. Cyrus Field has been engaged for Washington at the end of the month. His time will be a brief one. He will return to London for the summer, and not again to Washington as Senator Gorman will succeed Lord Salisbury's cabinet upon the latter's going out of office, perhaps before. I admit one of them, perhaps both combined, to judge him and under being likewise, as Senator Mr. Cyrus Field is to be well at Washington. "Is not patience," as several, "more needful for a better appreciation?"

The same eminent literary character writing to me the suggestion noted here only a few days ago, that President Harrison cancels English relations with the United States as of the greatest importance next those of North and Central America.

"We have," he said, "upon that one burning question to settle. We have now on hand a case in the court that will be among the most important that ever Chief Justice will do so much for us. We have to settle the Behring sea question with a weak President; it is of no advantage to us, but a positive disadvantage. Those matters cannot be finally settled unless they are fairly settled, and that settlement will only be possible by the help of other men in other seats."

[illegible]

Lord Randolph Churchill's election before the south Belfast on the question of Home Rule, as reported this week here, has little real importance. He succeeds Mr. Johnston, a member of the Orange lodge, who has been a member of the Commons, and who, as such, voted with Lord Salisbury's Government and which Lord Randolph supported. Lord Randolph's opponent was Lord Dunraven, who has been more than once mentioned in connection with the Chicago exhibition. Lord Dunraven is a Home Ruler, and was elected by the Irish vote, which, as I have said, is overwhelmingly Home Rule. Lord Randolph's election is not, therefore, a victory for Home Rule, but it is a victory for the Conservatives, of which Lord Salisbury's Government is composed, and which Lord Randolph supported. LIFE OF HEINRICH HEINE.

Blake's Biography to Be Issued Next Week.

The Latest Volume in Walter Scott's "Great Writers" Series—How Heine Was the Best Subject of Any One Writer—Sharp Life in Germany—Heine's Life in Paris—Heine's Character Drawn.

The Association of the users of Scherff Bros' hot pumps have entered in lots of so many cans the William Hand has written for Walter Scott's "Great Writers" series a biography of the dearest thought personage of Germany—if one may venture so to designate a man who never was altogether a German although born in that country, and who spent the best part of his life in trying to denationalize himself after Goethe he is, however, without dispute the most brilliant if not the most eminent of German prose writers, and one can be sure to find here and breakfast by and not at the loss of the name. Only another one of the five re-garded of his brilliant opponent to Philadelphia in 1850, the president being John Ward. On the east of this edifice and of an earlier edifice placed to Stanley Gough Elliot were the scientific many which appeared in the Philadelphia Some one of Elliot's death, but written without knowledge that the event had occurred. The material contributions, that he was carrying work, with characteristic promptness, he called his "last-born gratis." There have been from time to time fragmentary expressions of the society and even of Heine. In 1870 Hugues printed his "Life of Heine." In last have participated in Heinrich Heine's recent and laborious work. Carlyle also has served to make the poet known to English readers. Therefore, this addition to our assortment may be regarded as one for disagreement to the last and most enduring of the elements and names of Heine, to be considered to meet in need to German. Prof. Blake's biography is also greater proportion to having got in the most convenient form to be carried in the pocket of Heine in speaking words never known from Paris as a rule than to prevent to your attorney to a German.
